Tell this story.

World War 2: The Blitz.

Why Were the Germans Bombing?

The Germans wanted to damage industrial areas, like factories and ports, so that it made it harder for the British to move weapons to fight them.

They didn't just stop at London. They bombed many other cities throughout the country. They also bombed areas where people lived and thousands of people were killed.

Adolf Hitler thought that if the people of Britain saw others being killed and that their country was being destroyed, they would give up and stop fighting them, allowing Germany to take control of their country.

Air Raid Precautions

ARP

Air Raid Precautions were designed to keep Londoners safe and make it more difficult for the German planes to bomb the city.

Find out what types of Air Raid Precautions were put in place by reading the Air Raids section of 'Holnet- London at War 1939-1945' website. Make sure you have read all the sections (you will need to click on the tin helmets at the top of the page).
